

Stone Age Britain

By Archie Dowling

In the Early Stone Age, Britain was part of mainland Europe. The cavemen in the stone age were actually quite skill full the made loads of interesting tools like arrows, spears and swords.

Fun fact in the stone age cavemen used moss as toilet paper.

Flint was used to create almost everything (flint is a rock which when it is chipped it becomes sharp). Here is a picture of flint you can see the piece on the right looks more like an arrow head. Although it does not look it the piece on the left is more sharp. Although you would manly use sharp stones in the stone age you would also use blunt stones for grinding and also making sharps stones.

In stone age Britain there were huge animals like woolly mammoths , bears , rhinos and much more their skins were used for clothes their bones were used for jewellery and tools.

Quiz Time

1. true or false cavemen made tools out of flint?
2. True or false stone age glue was made of resin, pine and bees wax?
3. True or False one stone age arrow can kill a deer?
4. True or false stone age houses were made with stone?
5. True or False cavemen lived with dinosaurs.

Answers are upside down.

1.true.2.true 3.true 4. False 5. False

Cavemen were to have came 900,000 years ago (that is a long time).

